

UDDER FACTS

The udder is a sac-like structure containing two mammary glands, each with a single teat. The primary function of the udder is to produce and secrete milk for the nourishment of lambs and kids. Milk production (lactogenesis) begins between day 95 and 100 of pregnancy.

